The Science of Self Acceptance© is Illusion of Transparency and Public Speaking Fear

The term “illusion of transparency” was coined in a 1998 research paper by Gilovich, Savitsky, and Medvec who first studied this bias. Their research showed that we tend to overestimate the degree to which our thoughts or emotions “leak out” and become known to those observing us. It’s not as if we believe that others can read our mind; rather, we tend to believe that others can pick up on our self-assurance in one’s personal judgment, ability, power, etc. One’s self-confidence increases from experiences of having mastered particular activities. It is a positive belief that in the future one can generally accomplish what one wishes to do. Self-confidence is not the same as self-esteem, which is an evaluation of one’s own worth whereas self-confidence.

Confidence interval Wikipedia

In statistics, a confidence interval (CI) is a type of interval estimate computed from the statistics of the observed data that might contain the true value of an unknown population parameter. The interval has an associated confidence level that loosely speaking quantifies the level of confidence that the parameter lies in the interval.
